Smells Like Christmas Spirit!

Starbucks is handing out thousands of cards called "cheer passes." Recipients are asked to perform one act of kindness for someone else and pass the card along.

The cheer pass drive is not tied to any cause or charity and are not redeemable for coffee or merchandise, but are being used to start a chain of good will.

The Gap's Product Red label is tied to the Global Fund to Fight AIDS, Tuberculosis and Malaria in Africa. Product Red is the brainchild of U2's Bono and philanthropist Robert Shriver.

Participating companies include Motorola, Armani, Apple Computer, Converse and American Express, who have designed customized red products, including the iPod nano (PRODUCT) RED Special Edition. Read the manifesto HERE.

Yahoo Fails to Deliver

By staff writer, London Wilde

My online business is dependent on instant feedback from my customers, therefore I was shocked to receive the following:

Dear London,
InterXstream is sending out this notification to give our customers a heads up with a recent problem that is happening with Yahoo e-mails.

Three days ago Yahoo begin a process to help stop spam to their servers. They are using a technique called "greylisting". What happens is mail delivered to their servers is automatically denied. The sending mail server then is required to send the mail over and over again immediately until it is delivered.

However, this is causing many problems for most hosting providers out there. The problem is that most mail servers are not setup like this. Most mail servers are setup to send mail once, then if it is rejected attempt delivery again at a reasonable time interval.

Our servers are setup to resend every 30 minutes. It is setup like this to keep the load on both our server and the receiving end's load down to a minimum. If our servers had to deliver the same message 10-15 times until it was delivered this would cause some unnecessary load on the server.

This brings up the problem of mail not being able to be delivered to Yahoo.com address's. Currently what is happening is mail is being rejected by Yahoo, and getting stuck in our mail queue, trying to deliver every 30 minutes, when it is rejected again. So currently some mail being sent to yahoo.com address's from our servers is not reaching yahoo, or is being delayed.

We want you to know that we are working on a solution to the problem in a collaboration with over 1,000 other hosting companies. We have also put a formal complaint into yahoo about the problem.

We appreciate your patience in this matter, and we will keep you updated on our progress.

If you have any questions or concerns, please DO NOT REPLY TO THIS E-MAIL. Please send your responses to support@interxstream.com. If you reply to this e-mail response to you may be delayed.

Regards,

InterXstream Support Team
